Historical Background

The Barnard Women's Center was founded in 1971 and described in a 1972 brochure as "a new program for an old need: the dignity, autonomy, and equality of women. More than a place, more than a project, it symbolizes the way in which a college may gather its energies on behalf of women." Renamed the Barnard Center for Research on Women (BCRW) in 1987, the Center has throughout its existence supported programming, resources, and publications related to feminist scholarship and activism.

In the early 1970s, the Center supported various projects and resources, often acting as a central space for sharing information. The Center was instrumental in the formation of a Women's Studies program at Barnard in 1977 and also offered non-credit courses, many of which focused on vocational or financial training for women. The Center also housed the Women's Counseling Project, which provided information and referrals to women about legal, medical, vocational, therapy, and familial issues. A resource collection, founded in 1973 with the research materials of Myra Josephs (Barnard '28), grew to include both scholarly literature and ephemeral materials relating to the women's movement and was open to all.

The Scholar and the Feminist conference, first held in 1974, is a central part of the programming of the Center, which also includes the Reid lectureship (inaugurated in 1975 with Alice Walker and June Jordan as inaugural speakers) as well as other conferences, symposia, panels, lectures, exhibits, and events. Recent BCRW programs have featured such scholars and activists as Janet Mock, Angela Davis, Anita Hill, and more.

Early publications of the Center included a bibliography of scholarly research on women, Women's Work and Women's Studies (published 1971-1974), a booklet on vocational, family, medical, and legal resources titled Help (published in 1971 and 1973), and volumes of collected scholarly papers, The Barnard Occasional Papers on Women's Issues. In 1991, the Center started publishing a newsletter, and since 2003 has produced the online journal The Scholar & Feminist Online in addition to other print and online publications, videos, and a podcast.

The Center is governed by an Advisory Board (previously the Executive Committee) and a Director. Barnard English professor Catherine Stimpson was a part of the task force that advocated for the creation of the Center and assumed the role of acting director from its inception through 1972. Jane S. Gould (Barnard '40), who had previously worked in Alumnae Affairs and the Office of Careers and Placement at Barnard, assumed the directorship after Stimpson and served until 1983. Temma Kaplan served as director from 1983-1991 and was followed by Leslie J. Calman (Barnard '74), who served from 1991-2000. Janet R. Jakobsen was named director in 2000 and served until 2015, when Barnard Professor of Women's Gender and Sexuality Studies and now chair of the Africana Studies Department, Tina Campt took over the position. In 2018, Elizabeth Castelli assumed the role of director. The Center has also collaborated with a constellation of activists, artists and scholars as fellows including Reina Gossett, Amber Hollibaugh, Ntozake Shange, Mariame Kaba, and Katherine Acey.

Collection Scope and Content Summary

This collection consists of materials from the Barnard Center for Research on Women (BCRW), formerly known as the Barnard Women's Center.

It includes bylaws and charters; director's reports; financial reports and budgets; correspondence with other Barnard offices, administration and faculty at Columbia, and other organizations; minutes of the Executive Committee and other committees; planning and publicity materials for the Scholar and the Feminist Conference, the Reid lectures, and other talks and events; recordings of the Scholar and the Feminist Conference; planning materials for career workshops and other non-credit courses; administrative materials related to women's studies curriculum at Barnard and elsewhere; correspondence and administrative materials concerning the Women's Center Resource Collection, the Women's Counseling Project, the Women's Work and Women's Studies bibliography, working groups, and various other projects and publications of the Center; photographs of events; and copies of publications and ephemera produced by the Center.

Included in the collection are papers of Jane S. Gould, founding director, which relate to her work with the Center, and the papers of Janet Jakobsen from her years as director of the Center (2000-2015).

Highlights of the collection include planning and publicity materials for the Scholar and the Feminist Conference, as well as audio recordings of sessions from the conference in the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s. Among the scholars, activists, artists, writers, politicians, and others featured in the conference materials are bell hooks, Audre Lorde, Barbara Ehrenreich, Silvia Federici, Kate Millett, Barbara Kruger, Cherrie Moraga, Sharon Olds, Donna Haraway, and Bella Abzug. Other highlights include planning and publicity materials for the myriad events produced by the Center, and publications and ephemera from throughout the Center's history.

Related Materials

Related Collections

Under the directorship of Jane Gould, particularly in the early- and mid-1970s, the Center's affairs were closely affiliated with the work of the Alumnae Affairs Office and the Office of Placement and Career Planning. Further records of these offices can be found in BC9 Alumnae Association/Office of Alumnae Affairs records and BC5.9 Office of Career Development records, respectively.

Video recordings of some of the Center's events, including some of the early Reid Lectures, can be found in BC18 Moving Image Collection.

General

In this video, Anne de Mare, filmmaker and director of "Capturing the Flag," and Flora Davidson, Barnard College Professor of Political Science and Urban Studies, discuss themes in the film, including voter suppression in the 2016 elections and applying its lessons to the 2018 election cycle and beyond.

About the film:

A tight-knit group of friends travel to Cumberland County, North Carolina – the 2016 "poster child" for voter suppression – intent on proving that small acts of individual people can make a difference. What they find at the polls serves as both a warning and a call to action for anyone troubled by organized and often racist efforts around the country to disenfranchise voters, and anyone interested in protecting the 'One Person, One Vote' principle of U.S. democracy. Exploring themes that are constantly sensationalized and manipulated by the media, "Capturing The Flag" offers deeply personal, often surprising perspectives on the 2016 Presidential Election and its aftermath.

General

Featuring Cheryl Higashida, Mariame Kaba, and John Munro, this panel examines the radical anti-racist, anti-colonial, socialist internationalist, and feminist visions of social change, that Mary Helen Washington terms "Black Left Feminism." Cheryl Higashida, Mariame Kaba, and John Munro discuss key intellectuals, organizers, and artists in this internationalist tradition. They consider how Black Marxist feminists like Louise Thompson Patterson, Claudia Jones, Lorraine Hansberry and others confronted racism, patriarchy, capitalism, and imperialism in their own times. Panelists explore how the anticolonial Left survived the Cold War. They will suggest how new generations of antiracists, feminists, and socialists might engage this rich political tradition in our own times. Moderated by Jordan T. Camp.

This panel was recorded at the conference Global Radicalism: Solidarity, Internationalism, and Feminist Futures held on September 22, 2018 at The People's Forum in NYC

Lisa Armstrong, S. Ani Mukherji, and Margaret Stevens recover lost and forgotten histories of shared global struggle. They explore the formation of radical networks across spaces and struggles from Harlem, Mexico City, San Juan, Moscow, Port-Au-Prince, to Beijing from the early to mid-twentieth century. They describe how radicals linked struggles against Jim Crow, capitalism, imperialism, apartheid, and patriarchy in shared global movements. In examining these internationalist webs, they explore how hidden histories of global radicalism can embolden international solidarity at present. Moderated by Christina Heatherton.

This panel was recorded at the conference Global Radicalism: Solidarity, Internationalism, and Feminist Futures held on September 22, 2018 at The People's Forum in NYC.
