Biographical / Historical

Dan Talbot is a notable figure in art-house cinema in the United States and the founder of New Yorker Films. New Yorker Films began in 1965. The company was a means to exhibit foreign films at the now defunct New Yorker Theater. Talbot first acquired Bernardo Bertolucci's Before the Revolution, which led the way for New Yorker Films to acquire more than 400 film titles. New Yorker Films held the rights for theatrical release to theaters and colleges, as well as to distribute films in VHS and DVD format. New Yorker Films was sold to Madstone Films in 2009.

Daniel Talbot was born Daniel Distenfeld on July 21, 1926, in Bronx, New York. He graduated from New York University with a degree in literature. He married Toby Talbot in 1951. He worked in publishing, Gold Medal Books and Avon Books and had published three anthologies: A treasury of mountaineering stories, 1955; Thirteen Great Stories, 1955; Film: an anthology, 1959. He was also a book editor, serving as the East Coast story editor for Warner Bros, and the film critic for The Progressive. In 1963, Talbot produced "Point of Order" with Emile de Antonio.

He also operated multiple theaters in New York's Upper West Side: New Yorker Theater (1960-1973), Cinema Studio (1977-1990), Metro Theater (1982-1987), and Lincoln Plaza Cinema (1981-2018). Talbot was honored in 2004 by IFP/New York with the Gotham Award for Industry Lifetime Achievement. Through his exhibition and distribution activities, Talbot provided moviegoers in the United States with access to a vast array of international filmmakers, including Robert Bresson, Claude Chabrol, Rainer Fassbinder, Federico Fellini, Werner Herzog, Yasujiro Ozu, Ousmane Sembene, and Wim Wenders, among others.

Dan Talbot died in New York City on December 29, 2017, at the age of 91.

The Dan Talbot Papers were purchased by the Rare Book and Manuscript Library at Columbia University in March 2009.

The collection was previously deposited/stored in various locations prior to the collection sale in 2009: storage room of Lincoln Plaza Cinemas, MoMA's offsite storage facilities, offices of New Yorker Films, Dan Talbot's home, University of Wisconsin's Center for Film and Theater Research.

Subseries II.1: New Yorker Theaters (6 cartons with 112 volumes of guest books, and 2 cartons of financial records, and posters) was previously placed on deposit at the Wisconsin Center for Film and Theater Research and the State Historical Society of Wisconsin (now Wisconsin Historical Society) by Daniel Talbot in 1974.

Processing Information

Collection-level record describing unprocessed material made public in summer 2018 as part of the Hidden Collections initiative.

Processing Information

The majority of the collection was processed by Adrien Hilton in 2013-2014, with the assistance of Zuleimy Gabriela Alcantara and Andrew Lee. The boxes were sent to ReCAP due to onsite space constraints. Some boxes were minimally processed. The posters series was inventoried and processed by Tom McCutcheon with the assistance of Kevin Schlottmann and other students in 2021. The reprocessing work in 2023 includes a review of the entire collection, and conversion of various inventories into a container list for the finding aid with additional processing and rehousing work for materials that were not processed offsite and the remaining 67 boxes onsite. This work was completed by Yingwen Huang with some assistance of Madelyn Elizondo in Fall 2023.

Duplicative bank deposit receipts (1965-1979) from Subseries II.1 were deaccessioned due to the information already being reflected on daily box office reports. Duplicative materials such as commercial VHS and posters were also deaccessioned during processing. Duplicative serials have also been deaccessioned: American Cinematographer, American Film, Cineaste, Film Comment, Sight and Sound, New York Times Film Reviews, Cahiers du cinéma, Artforum. Researchers may search and request these serials via the library catalog and the e-journal databases. MPLP processing applied to some boxes, especially in Subseries I.G: Theatrical Engagements, the original folders were retained and labels were reinforced.

Box 355-356 Producer reports found onsite and added to finding aid-yh,2024.

Subseries I.C: New Yorker Video/Home Video, 1973-2006

Scope and Contents

The Home Video Division launched its first release in November 1989, with the release of four classic titles from its international film library: Bernardo Bertolucci's Before the Revolution, Wayne Wang's Chan Is Missing, Rainer Werner Fassbinder's Fox and His Friends, and Yasujiro Ozu's Tokyo Story. The New Yorker Video released all its titles in their original aspect ratios with enhanced subtitles. Some of the New Yorker Video releases were also distributed by Baker and Taylor, Ingram Video, and Star Video. Beth deVoe was named the Director of Home Video.

This subseries consists of files relating to New Yorker Videos' home videos and commercial video releases, dating from 1973 to 2002. Materials include press releases, catalog and sales lists, advertisements, cover stills, and other publicity files for creating the package of the video releases and distributions. Additional files related to the films distributed through Home Video may also appear in Subseries I.F: Publicity Files.

Series II: Theaters, 1960-2007

Scope and Contents

This series consists of business and financial records of the movie theaters located in Manhattan's Upper West Side neighborhood that the Talbots operated: New Yorker Theater, Cinema Studio, Metro, and Lincoln Plaza Cinemas, dating from 1960 to 2007. Some materials from the theaters may also be found in Series I: New Yorker Films, 1965-2008 as Talbot was also operating the distribution company in conjunction with the theaters.

Subseries II.1: New Yorker Theater consists of guest books, daily box office reports, bank deposit receipts, correspondence, administrative files, programs, photographs of film titles screened at the theater, dating from 1960 to 1973. The guest books, each about 300 pages, were provided in the theater lobby for guests to write their names and miscellaneous remarks. Some guest books include remarks and signatures left by the city's creative elites. The daily box office reports and receipts document the financial status of the theater, dating from 1960 to 1971. For a list of New Yorker Theater Lobby Poster, see Series V: Oversized.

New Yorker Theater was a movie house in the Upper West Side, located at 2409 Broadway, 88th Street. It was originally opened as the Adelphi Theatre by 1914, it was later called the Yorktown Theatre. Dan Talbot purchased the theater and it was opened to the public in March 1960. The New Yorker's first screening was a double feature of Laurence Olivier's Henry V (1944) and the French short film The Red Balloon (1956). The theater was a family business and Dan Talbot was the manager and programmer while Toby Talbot's parents, Bella and Joe Tolpen, worked behind the concessions. The Talbots sold The New Yorker Theater to the Walter Reade Organization in 1973 as he focused his efforts on film distribution at the New Yorker Film.

Subseries II.2: Cinema Studio and the Metro consists of business and financial records of the Cinema Studio and the Metro, which were operated by the Talbots, dating from 1977 to 1988. ## Scope and Contents

New Yorker Theater was a movie house in the Upper West Side, located at 2409 Broadway, 88th Street. It was originally opened as the Adelphi Theatre by 1914, it was later called the Yorktown Theatre. Dan Talbot purchased the theater and it was opened to the public in March 1960. The New Yorker's first screening was a double feature of Laurence Olivier's Henry V (1944) and the French short film The Red Balloon (1956). The theater was a family business and Dan Talbot was the manager and programmer while Toby Talbot's parents, Bella and Joe Tolpen, worked behind the concessions. The Talbots sold The New Yorker Theater to the Walter Reade Organization in 1973 as he focused his efforts on film distribution at the New Yorker Film.

The materials consist of guest books, daily box office reports, bank deposit receipts, correspondence, administrative files, programs, photographs of film titles screened at the theater, dating from 1960 to 1973. The guest books, each about 300 pages, were provided in the theater lobby for guests to write their names and miscellaneous remarks. Some guest books include remarks and signatures left by the city's creative elites. The daily box office reports and receipts document the financial status of the theater, dating from 1960 to 1971.
