Historical Note

The Office of Alumni and Development (formerly known as University Development and Alumni Relations or UDAR) upholds the mission of Columbia University by maximizing useful philanthropic gift and grant support in ways that bring benefit to the University, satisfaction to its donors, and fulfillment to its faculty, students and staff. All individual school and constituent alumni offices report to this office, which itself reports to the University's central administration. The Office of Alumni Relations and Development is responsible for the running of the Columbia Alumni Association, the Columbia Campaign, and publishing Columbia, the University's quarterly magazine for alumni, which was founded in 1975. The magazine is sent free of charge to all alumni of Columbia University in the U.S. and abroad, as well as to faculty, staff, and friends. In 2009 UDAR rebranded itself as the Office of Alumni and Development when it moved into the newly built Columbia Alumni Center on 113th Street.

Scope and Contents

This series contains the photo files kept by Jerry Kisslinger. The images were used in the Columbia alumni magazine and also for other University publications such as the President's Annual Reports, campaign and admissions brochures. There are photographic prints, slides, negatives and positives; in black-and-white and color. Most of the images document the terms of Presidents Michael I. Sovern (1980-1993) and George Rupp (1993-2002). Some of the materials in this series are duplicates of materials contained in Series I and II of this collection.

Subseries III.1: Individuals, 1948-2005

Scope and Contents

This sub-series consists of photographs of individuals, including alumni, trustees, honorary degree recipients, faculty and administrators.
