Biographical Note

Bob Fass (1933-2021) was born in Brooklyn, New York, on June 29, 1933. After graduating from Syracuse University in 1955, he joined the U.S. Army, where he directed and acted in dramatic productions for the Fort Bragg Entertainment Workshop. He then returned to New York City to study acting at the Neighborhood Playhouse and the Stella Adler Studio of Acting. He joined the staff of WBAI in 1963.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical Note

In the 1960s, Fass helped create the format known as free-form radio on his program, Radio Unnameable. He became known for his long, discursive conversations with his listeners, as well as for the many musicians, performers, and activists who appeared on his show. Radio Unnameable provided a platform for many key figures of 1960s counterculture and helped launch the careers of artists including Bob Dylan, Arlo Guthrie, and Joni Mitchell.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical Note

In 1977, a dispute over WBAI staff unionization resulted in Bob Fass being banned from WBAI for five years. During those years, he broadcast at WFMU, WBAI's listener-supported counterpart, in New Jersey. He also returned to acting in theatrical works. He was reinstated at WBAI in 1982.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical Note

Throughout the 1980s and beyond, Fass continued to work as an actor and master of ceremonies for live events, in addition to hosting Radio Unnameable. He also produced several smaller scale projects for radio and public access television. Radio Unnameable ceased to be broadcast nightly after 1982. In 2006, it was reduced to once a week. Bob Fass continued to host Radio Unnameable weekly after midnight on WBAI-FM until shortly before his death on April 24, 2021.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

The Bob Fass Recordings and Papers contains materials created by Bob Fass, host of the late-night program Radio Unnameable on New York City's WBAI radio station. The collection primarily consists of audio recordings of Radio Unnameable and other radio programs hosted by Bob Fass between 1963 and 2011. A small number of video recordings, photographs, correspondence, printed ephemera, and motion picture films are also included in the collection.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

Radio Unnameable provided a platform for many key figures of 1960s counterculture and helped launch the careers of artists including Bob Dylan, Arlo Guthrie, and Joni Mitchell. Guests frequently featured on the program include Greenwich Village-based folk musicians such as Larry Estridge, Tuli Kupferberg, and Sammy Walker; political activists including Abbie and Anita Hoffman and other members of the Yippies; the political assassination conspiracy theorists Mae Brussell, Flo Kennedy, and Ted Gandolfo; and comic performers and satirists Paul Krassner, Marshall Efron, and Wavy Gravy.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

Bob Fass also used his radio programs to cover protests and current events of interest to his audience, including the 1963 March on Washington, the protests at the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago, and the 1988 Tompkins Square Park Riot. Some events, such as the Yip-In at Grand Central Station in April of 1968, were covered live in the field on Radio Unnameable. Others, such as the November 1975 revolt on Rikers Island, were covered via telephone calls from listeners who had information to share.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

The bulk of the audiovisual recordings in the collection are on open-reel audiotapes and audiocassettes. Other formats include VHS, U-Matic, and 8mm videocassettes, many of which were used to store digital audio recordings before compact discs became widely available. A few dozen open reel videotapes contain video recordings. Most of the collection's later audio and video recordings, dating from circa 2001 to 2011, are on compact discs and DVDs.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Contents

Descriptive information created for many of the audiovisual recordings is preliminary. Item identification is based on information found on the packaging of the item, which may not be accurate or complete. Reusing tapes seems to have been a standard practice at WBAI. Tapes and cases also appear to have been mistakenly swapped on occasion during the decades prior to their arrival at the Rare Book and Manuscript Library. Item descriptions will be corrected as the items are identified.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Arrangement

The collection does not seem to have had an original order. It is arranged into seven series based on the archivists' best understanding of the materials' content, though some recordings remain unidentified. Materials in each series are arranged chronologically where dates are known; otherwise they are arranged alphabetically.

Conditions Governing Access

To request a copy of an audio or video item, the researcher must visit the RBML reading room and listen to / view the item. If the item is still desired, a description of the proposed use of the item will be evaluated by the donor.

Restrictions on Access

The papers and photographs are located off-site. You will need to request this material at least three business days in advance to use the collection in the Rare Book and Manuscript Library reading room.

Restrictions on Access

Unique time-based media items have been reformatted and are available onsite via links in the container list. Commercial materials are not routinely digitized. The items are also browsable via the Digital Library Collections website and many cases have additional metadata.

Conditions Governing Access

Any digital media in this collection must be imaged before use. Please contact the library to arrange access to these materials.

Processing Information

Recordings processed by Celeste Brewer, Christopher Laico, Vianca Victor, and Jonathan Jara, 2017. Recordings digitized, 2018-2022. Papers processed by Celeste Brewer, May-September 2023.

Items in Series VII were originally described in the first five series of the collection. They were moved into this series during the digitization process for this collection, after they were determined to be blank, damaged beyond repair, or otherwise impossible to digitize.

Slides in boxes originally numbered 132-148 were rehoused into boxes 127-131. Boxes 132-148 no longer exist. Films in boxes 162-163 were rehoused onto one reel per original box during digitization. As a result, Box 162-163 is now one box containing two film reels.

The entirety of the papers in Series VI were cleaned to remove mold in 2020. (Photographs and slides were not affected by mold and did not need cleaning.) Approximately one third of the recordings in the collection were also affected by mold and were cleaned prior to digitization.

The original order of any material, insofar as it existed, was lost over the course of several moves and a hasty retrieval from Fass's home on Staten Island during Hurricane Sandy in 2012. Many recordings were unlabeled and some were misidentified, possibly due to accidental swaps of items and cases. Even some paper-based material is unattributed or unidentified. Identification of material in the collection was an extensive effort involving staff members from across Columbia University Libraries, including Original and Special Materials Cataloging librarians and staff in Preservation and Reformatting. RBML welcomes additional information about unidentified or under-described materials in this collection.

At some point before 2017 and 2023, some materials were erroneously labeled with the call number MS#1786. Many of these errors were resolved; however, some material may still retain the error. The call number for this collection is MS#1784.

Scope and Contents

Jeremy Steig, Adrian Guillery, Dick Davie, and Arlo Guthrie. The tape begins with a recording of a routine about a flat world. Bob comments that Radio Unnameable cannot play the version of "Alice's Restaurant" that it had been playing because Arlo doesn't like the recording. Arlo Guthrie introduces and plays "Alice's Restaurant Massacree Part 2," which is "Different than any other version." (The version played is the general mythic version with slight unique details like "dead cow in the hallway.") Bob says that Arlo Guthrie is in the studio. Arlo introduces Steve Elliott. There is a brief discussion about the different versions of Alice's Restaurant." Bob asks Arlo to stay. Jeremy Steig is also there. Bob discusses a variety of subjects with Dick Davie, who also takes phone calls. Callers choose which version of "Alice's Restaurant" is "better." Dick Davie mentions Jean Shepard. Bob joins in and mentions that "Alice's Restaurant" is not on any record that you can buy. The mikes are opened in the studio and Jeremy Steig and Adrian Guillery are playing an instrumental into "Let Me Tell You People (Just What's Going On)." Dick Davie continues to take calls. Callers like the first version of "Alice's Restaurant" better

Scope and Contents
Knocking sounds and inaudible chants until 2 minutes in: someone is trying to enter the room. Police are allowed to enter. They read a court order dated March 11, 1977 while music plays in the background: contempt of court for having failed to comply with a temporary restraining order to leave the premises of the station. Chaotic and angry conversation, jokes, and muffled sounds. Fass is put in handcuffs around 16m. Fotene S. Chigounis and Lynnsa Mueles spell their names at the end.

Scope and Contents 1974, between mid-February and mid-April: Bob reads from a SoHo Weekly News interview with Abbie Hoffman, who was arrested in his home for cocaine possession and intent to sell cocaine August 28, 1973. Hoffman claims that drug laws targeting cocaine as opposed to heroin are based in racism, as cocaine is not addictive and doesn't cause death. Bob has Anita Hoffman on the phone. Between phone calls regarding the date of a march on Washington to impeach Nixon, Bob plays a 1968 tape of Abbie Hoffman in the studio with him. Hoffman tells of his experience being arrested for a crime aboard an aircraft, the instance of which led to the Chicago Seven trial. Bob takes a few more calls, including one from a man impersonating Hoffman, and one from a woman objecting to playing tapes of Mae Brussell

Subseries II.3: Bob Fass show, circa 1965-1990

Scope and Contents

Subseries II.3 contains recordings identified as the Bob Fass Show. Their content does not seem to differ from Radio Unnameable in any significant way. It may be that these recordings were simply identified by WBAI staff (or Fass himself) as unspecified Bob Fass [radio] show recordings, as it was unclear from the contents whether they were from Radio Unnameable, Beyond the Unnameable, Night Into Day, or other smaller WBAI programs hosted by Bob Fass.

Series III: Bootlegs, demo tapes, and other live recordings, 1952-2011

Scope and Contents

Series III contains recordings featuring performers other than Bob Fass, and materials in other formats whose primary subjects are not Bob Fass. Some materials in the series include Bob Fass as one of many subjects—for example, the recordings of the Living Theatre's production of Poland/1931, in which Fass played one of three leading roles. Other materials in the series, such as the field recordings in Subseries III.3, may have been created by Bob Fass, but he is not their primary subject.

Subseries III.1: Audition and demo tapes, 1961-2000, undated

Scope and Contents

Subseries III.1 contains recordings sent to Bob Fass by musical performers who hoped that he would play their recordings on his show—as he sometimes did. The series also contains demo tapes and other short recordings by more established artists, such as Country Joe McDonald and Buzzy Linhart.

Series VI: Papers, photographs, and slides, 1941-circa 2010s, (circa 1960s-1990s)

Scope and Contents

Series VI contains correspondence, printed ephemera, newsletters and zines, manuscripts, and photographs and slides created or collected by Bob Fass throughout his life and career. Many of the materials in Series VI relate to recordings in the first five series of the collection. For example, photographs of the February 1967 Fly-In—recordings of which can be found in Series I.1—are included in Series VI. Other materials in the series document Bob Fass's political and musical interests, personal life, and Greenwich Village counterculture more broadly. Boxes 127-131 contain slides, Boxes 249 and 309 contain photographs, and Boxes 266 and 293-296 contain oversized materials. Photographic prints are generally black and white, while slides are in full color.

Processing Information:

Processing Information

Materials in Series VI were physically grouped into boxes by format, primarily in order to avoid storing materials that had been treated to remove mold alongside those that were not affected. Oversize materials are in Boxes 265 and 293-296. Slides were removed from carousels and placed in archival sleeves; papers were placed in acid-free folders. The vast majority of the papers and photographs were not stored in folders when they arrived at the Rare Book and Manuscript Library. The few folders that did exist did not always contain material that corresponded to their labels. The groupings of items into folders and arrangement of those folders was entirely imposed by the archivist.

Subseries VI.1: Individual correspondence and subject files, 1941-2008, (circa 1960s-1990s)

Scope and Contents

Subseries VI.1 contains letters from and printed ephemera related to individuals who appeared as guests on Radio Unnameable or were otherwise significant figures in the counterculture movements with which Bob Fass was associated. Many, including Richard Elman, Abbie Hoffman, and Paul Krassner, were also Fass's personal friends. (Manuscripts by Elman, Krassner, and Gerd Stern, among others, are located in Subseries VI.3.) There are also slides and a small number of photographs documenting protests against the Vietnam War, the 1968 Chicago Democratic National Convention, and nuclear armaments, as well as musical performances including the Newport Jazz and Folk Festivals. Finally, the subseries contains subject files containing mostly printed ephemera related to Fass's political and artistic affiliations and interests. These include the Youth International Party (Yippies), various political assassination and conspiracy theories, Manhattan tenant and squatter organizing efforts, and the Greenwich Village folk music scene.

Subseries VI.2: WBAI, 1963-circa 2010s

Scope and Contents

Subseries VI.2 contains material related to the radio station WBAI and Bob Fass's association with it from the 1960s through the 2000s, primarily as host of Radio Unnameable. Program logs for episodes of Radio Unnameable are sparse; those that do exist date primarily from 1986 through 1992 and 1995 through 1996. Fass was also a party to periodic station programming and management disputes, the most significant of which—described by Fass as the "WBAI Crisis"—occurred in 1977, and culminated in Fass's on-air arrest and ban from the station for five years. Material from these incidents is included in the subseries as well. One small folder in this subseries contains materials from WFMU in New Jersey, from which Fass broadcast his radio show until his ban from WBAI expired in 1982. There are also photographs of guests and musical performances in the studio at WBAI, as well as several boxes of letters sent to Bob Fass by Radio Unnameable listeners from the 1960s through the 2010s. Finally, there are a few folders of material from early efforts to digitize selected audiotapes from the collection before its sale to the Rare Book and Manuscript Library.

Processing Information:Processing Information

This material was separated from the rest of Fass's listener mail to facilitate researcher access. Fass had a particular interest in incarcerated people's rights. He dedicated many of his Radio Unnameable broadcasts to highlighting the cases of individuals including Rubin "Hurricane" Carter and John Artis, Adam Abdul Hakeem (Larry Davis), Gary McGivern, and Jeremiah O'Sullivan, as well as broadcasting a 1975 revolt on Rikers Island and the 1971 Attica Uprising in real time.

Letters from Lloyd, 1974

box 310

folder 3

Biographical / Historical

Lloyd was an otherwise unidentified person who sent cryptic letters to Bob Fass at WBAI, along with requests to forward enclosed letters to the musician Joni Mitchell. Fass appears to have kept mail from Lloyd in an envelope separate from the rest of his correspondence.

Subseries VI.3: Other activities and personal materials, circa 1950s-2009
