Biographical / Historical

Alexander Yevgenievich Sumerkin was born on November 2, 1943 in Moscow. He graduated from Moscow State University and worked as translator and interpreter for the Soviet Union of Cinematographers. Sumerkin emigrated from the Soviet Union in 1977. He lived the rest of his life in New York City, where he worked as a publisher, editor, translator, critic and essayist. A known and respected member of the Russian émigré literary community, Sumerkin was the chief editor of Russica Publishers and secretary to Joseph Brodsky. He edited and published a five-volume authoritative academic edition of Marina Tsvetaeva's poetry (1990) and a two-volume edition of her prose. Sumerkin was the editor of Brodsky's last collection of poems,

Peizazh s navodneniem (1995). He also edited and published works by Vladimir Vysotsky, Nina Berberova, Eduard Limonov and numerous others. A lover of theater and music, he frequently published reviews of performances and recordings in Russian-language newspapers. Sumerkin died in New York City on December 14, 2006.
