Biographical / Historical

Sidney Kramer was an editor who worked with Ian Ballantine of Ballantine Books and also Pocket/Penguin/Bantam. Kramer was an original director of Ballantine & Co. and then of Bantam. In short, he was a paperback reprint publisher, which is very interesting for the history of 20th-century publishing. The "paperback revolution" can be dated to about mid-century and is often attributed to increased college attendance after WWII.

Series II: Library

Scope and Contents

This series contains Kramer's book collection. The majority comprises paperbacks that Kramer marketed. There are also some books that were likely trade research or inspiration. The series also includes a small number of translations of children's books, mostly Richard Scarry, into non-English languages. These are found in boxes 91-92.

The author, imprint, and publisher's stock number are noted when found.
