History

435 cuneiform tablets were purchased in 1895 from the New York antiquities dealer, David Z. Noorian for Columbia by friends of the University, and 32 tablets were bought from Dikran Kelekian, December 1895, with funds from Mr. L.S. Bernheimer. These acquisitions were organized by Professor Richard Gottheil. In 1902, Professor John Dyneley Prince presented 18 tablets. In 1934, Professor David Eugene Smith donated 16 cuneiform tablets, and in 1936 George Arthur Plimpton gave 34, including the now famous mathematical tablet, Plimpton 322 (CULC 460). In 1959, the collection of 75 tablets belonging to Paul Monroe, Professor at Teachers College, was donated in his memory by his children, Jeanette Monroe Bassett and Ellis Monroe. There were also several small gifts: one tablet from Mr. Philip Coan, reported in Columbia Library Columns 8:2, Feb 1959, p. 35; two tablets from Dr. J.G. Phelps Stokes in 1960, four tablets in 1965 from Harry G. Friedman, two from Professor Lynn Thorndike in 1966, three from Professor Frances Henne in 1973, one tablet from Otto W. Fuhrman (undated gift), and a tablet transferred from the Art Properties in 2011. A cylinder seal in hematite was purchased in 1962 (CU Columns 12:1, Nov 1962, p. 30); another was purchased with funds from Dallas Pratt & Aubrey Cartwright (CU Columns 13:1, Nov 1963, p. 40).

Conditions Governing Access

CULC 460 (i.e., Plimpton 322) is viewable only by appointment. CULC 157 is labelled as moldy, and would only be viewable after consultation with the conservation department.

Custodial History

435 cuneiform tablets were purchased in 1895 from the New York antiquities dealer, David Z. Noorian for Columbia by friends of the University, and 32 tablets were bought from Dikran Kelekian, December 1895, with funds from Mr. L.S. Bernheimer. These acquisitions were organized by Professor Richard Gottheil. In 1902, Professor John Dyneley Prince presented 18 tablets. In 1934, Professor David Eugene Smith donated 16 cuneiform tablets, and in 1936 George Arthur Plimpton gave 34, including the now famous mathematical tablet, Plimpton 322 (CULC 460). In 1959, the collection of 75 tablets belonging to Paul Monroe, Professor at Teachers College, was donated in his memory by his children, Jeanette Monroe Bassett and Ellis Monroe. There were also several small gifts: one tablet from Mr. Philip Coan, reported in Columbia Library Columns 8:2, Feb 1959, p. 35; two tablets from Dr. J.G. Phelps Stokes in 1960, four tablets in 1965 from Harry G. Friedman, two from Professor Lynn Thorndike in 1966, three from Professor Frances Henne in 1973, one tablet from Otto W. Fuhrman (undated gift), and a tablet transferred from the Art Properties in 2011. A cylinder seal in hematite was purchased in 1962 (CU Columns 12:1, Nov 1962, p. 30); another was purchased with funds from Dallas Pratt & Aubrey Cartwright (CU Columns 13:1, Nov 1963, p. 40).

Processing Information

Unfortunately, it is not always possible to determine when each tablet entered the collection, which has been reorganized a few times, most drastically in 1971, when Robert David Freedman made a catalog of the Ur III texts as a Master's Thesis at Columbia University.

Processing Information

In 1993, the collection, which had been housed in 46 boxes (the tablets either wrapped in tissue and kept in individual microfilm boxes, or just piled into boxes), was rehoused. The tablets were put in artifact cartons, retaining any old numbers or notes found on the old boxes or with the tablets, and retaining the earlier order. In 2011, needing to number the 300 or so previously unnumbered tablets because of the CDLI scanning, the decision was made to renumber the entire collection in one numerical sequence (the CULC numbers). While we attempted to keep items largely in the old order, some rearrangement was made to put like items together; for example, the F numbers. The casts and the non-inscribed objects were put at the end of the collection.

Processing Information

In 2011-2012, Columbia's tablets were added to the Cuneiform Digital Library Initiative (CDLI) in a collaboration funded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Every tablet is described to a greater or lesser extent there, based on available data, including the text of the 2010 Garfinkle catalog; each tablet which was physically sound enough was scanned by someone from the CDLI. In 2018, in the process of creating this finding aid, boxes 30-33 were reordered to divide cleanly the ancient material from the modern casts, and the box of paper files collected together and described for the first time.

Processing Information

A concordance between the various publication numbers exists.

Processing Information

This collection was processed by Jane Rodgers Siegel in 2018, after being partially cataloged by Isaac Mendelsohn in 1943, reorganized by Robert Freedman in 1971, and rehoused by Anne Simms in 2000. Finding aid written by Jane Rodgers Siegel in May 2018.

Collection Inventory

Series I: Tablets and contemporary objects, circa 3100-539 BCE

Scope and Contents

625 cuneiform tablets dating from circa 3100-539 BCE, four cylinder seals, with modern impressions of them, and fourteen clay and stone objects, nine of which are labelled A through I. Provenance of these items is mostly unclear.

Scope and Contents

The tablets are most thoroughly described at the CDLI (at least those tablets for which descriptive information existed), and images of most of the tablets can be found there. This finding aid identifies each tablet by its Columbia University Libraries Cuneiform number (e.g. CULC 001); its identifier at CDLI, and by the references to the more complete published catalogs of the collection (Garfinkle, Freedman, and Mendelsohn; for citations see the section Other Finding Aids.

with inadequate coloring. In 1990, 50 copies were commissioned from a specialist who did work for the Metropolitan Museum of Art and sold to aficionados; a copy (additional to the 50, this one with rejected painting), was given to Jane Rodgers Siegel in 1990 and later returned to the collection. The collection now contains three casts, two colored and one plain, none labelled as to their origin.
