Biographical / Historical

The Columbia Forum was a quarterly journal for alumni started in 1957. As a replacement for the Columbia Alumni News, it was originally created to provide a forum for the thoughts and opinions of people who were in some way connected to Columbia, covering the entire range of the arts and sciences. It also included the Columbia Chronicle, a short section of news about the University. The publication was sent free-of-charge to alumni; non-alumni could subscribe or buy single copies with the proceeds going to the Columbia General Scholarship Fund. Writers for the Forum included such well-known Columbia professors as Peter Gay, Richard Hofstadter, Moses Hadas, Eric Bentley, Fritz Stern, and Ivar Berg. An anthology of the quarterly was published in 1968, edited by Peter Spackman and Lee Ambrose.

In October 1970, the University announced that the Forum's budget allotment would be discontinued and that Winter 1970 issue would be its last. The Forum appealed to its readers for funding pledges and it was soon reinstated as a non-official University publication. The Winter 1971 issue was the first of the new magazine and was also the last under the auspices of the University, mailed free to alumni. Subsequent issues were paid for by subscriptions and donations on its way to becoming a self-sustaining magazine, featuring no advertisements. The magazine was unable to become financially independent. With declining subscriptions and increasing debt, the Forum ceased publication in 1975.
