Biographical / Historical

Frederick Augustus Porter Barnard (1809-1889) was President of Columbia College from 1864 until 1889. He was born in Sheffield, Massachusetts, and graduated from Yale University in 1828. Prior to his appointment at Columbia, he was a professor of mathematics, chemistry, natural philosophy, and natural history at the University of Alabama (1838-1854) and Chancellor of the University of Mississippi (1856-1861). He was also ordained in the Episcopal Church in 1854. In 1857, a controversy erupted over his acceptance of the testimony of Jane, a woman enslaved by Barnard, against that of two students who had assaulted her. Barnard moved north in 1861, when the University of Mississippi closed after its entire student body enlisted in the Confederate army.

Biographical / Historical

Barnard oversaw the rapid growth of Columbia College and advocated for the education of women. As a result, he is the namesake of Barnard College. He served in various other public capacities as well, including President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1866, commissioner to the 1867 and 1878 Universal Expositions in Paris, and President of the American Metrological Society. He married Margaret McMurray (1820-1891) in 1847. They had no children. He died in New York City on April 27, 1889.

Processing Information

The 2019 addition to this collection was processed by Celeste Brewer. EAD finding aid written by Celeste Brewer in May 2019.

Processing Information

The collection was arranged according to material format prior to 2019. Cataloged correspondence, loose manuscripts, and photographs were stored in boxes 1-6. Boxes 7 and 8 contained the bound volumes in the collection, and printed materials were stored loose in box 9. Materials in box 9 were placed in folders in May 2019.

Processing Information

Materials that arrived in 2017 with the Barnard Family Papers were not physically integrated with the collection, both for efficiency's sake and to maintain evidence of their distinct provenance. They are located in boxes 10 through 14. Oversize materials in this addition were physically separated and stored in one flat box and one map case folder.
