Biographical / Historical

Arthur Doak Barnett (1921-1999) was born in Shanghai, the fourth child of Eugene Epperson and Bertha Smith Barnett. His father worked in China for the Young Men's Christian Association until 1936 when the family returned to the United States. Barnett graduated from Yale University summa cum laude with undergraduate and master's degrees in international relations. He served in the U.S. Marine Corp in the Pacific during World War II.

Biographical / Historical

In 1947 Barnett returned to China as a fellow of the Institute of Current World Affairs and a correspondent for the Chicago Daily News. He traveled throughout China, covering the civil war, the occupation of Peking (Beijing) in 1949, and the establishment of the People's Republic of China. After the revolution he became a public affairs officer for the American Consulate General in Hong Kong. A 1955 Daily News clipping described him as "the last American correspondent to leave China after the Reds took over."

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical / Historical

Returning to the United States in 1959, Barnett joined the Ford Foundation where he secured funds for research projects on China despite the political climate of McCarthyism. He joined the Columbia University faculty in 1961 as Professor of Public Law and Government and taught there for eight years. His students included Kenneth Lieberthal, an advisor on China to the Clinton Administration, and Michel Oksenberg, who participated in the Carter Administration's establishment of diplomatic relations with China.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical / Historical

In 1966 Barnett was principal witness for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee review of U.S. China policy. Consistently advocating a non-confrontational approach, he advised Presidents Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon to reach out to China, coining the phrase "containment without isolation." President Ronald Reagan adopted Barnett's position against the sale of jet fighters to Taiwan in early 1980s, and the Bush and Clinton Administrations were guided by his views on the Tiananmen Square protests of 1989.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical / Historical

Barnett was instrumental in establishing several organizations on China, including the Joint Committee on Contemporary China, the Committee on Scholarly Communications with the People's Republic of China, and the National Committee on US-China Relations.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical / Historical

He returned to China many times throughout his life to conduct research that formed the basis for his many published works and as a member of delegations and exchanges he helped to organize. He told an interviewer his most interesting years were spent traveling to every province in China, often on horseback, in the 1940s as a half-time reporter for the Daily News.

Biographical / Historical

"We in the West, and particularly in the United States, keep going through cycles, or swings of the pendulum, from unrealistic euphoria about China to a feeling of disillusionment because it doesn't live up to our unrealistic expectations. " (Brookings, 22).

Kissinger. Documents cover Barnett's views on Taiwan and on relations between the US, China, and the Soviet Union, as well as the Nixon Administration's rapprochement with China. Records cover meetings Barnett organized at Brookings of academicians and government officials on US China policies. Also here are letters written to Barnett from Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine, media representatives, academic colleagues, and others after Barnett's heart attack in 1971. There are documents on Jimmy Carter's Presidential candidacy, State Department officials and members of Congress. Materials also include reports on a 1980 meeting of the US-People's Republic of China Joint Commission on Cooperation in Science and Technology, which was held in China and the subsequent 1981 Brookings-Chinese Academy of Social Sciences Conference on Political, Economic, and Security Trends and Problems in East Asia, held in Williamsburg, Virginia

Subseries I.4: Johns Hopkins University, Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies, 1982-1989

Scope and Contents

Johns Hopkins University contains material covering Barnett's tenure as the George and Sadie Hyman Professor of Chinese Studies at Hopkins' Nitze School of Advanced International Studies. Included here are notebooks from his courses on Chinese politics and foreign policy. There are also notes and transcripts from speeches given and conferences attended. Records from a 1984 trip to China and the USSR include notes from an individual interview with Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang on Chinese foreign policy. Folders on multiple trips to Asia include correspondence, receipts, expenses, schedules, newspaper clippings, interview lists, and handwritten notes. There are reports from a 1988 Soviet-American Conference in Moscow on Mutual Security. Barnett's personal travel diaries are contained in Suberies V.1.

Physical Description: (2 folders)Subseries II.3: National Committee on US-China Relations, 1965-1995*Scope and Contents

National Committee on US-China Relations traces Barnett's role in the Committee's establishment, his tenure as Board Chairman in 1968, and active participation through retirement. Included are proposal drafts for a National Committee on US-China Policy, a draft prospectus using the current organization name, correspondence among founding members, a certificate of incorporation, and a press release announcing the committee's formation. Correspondence with elected and appointed government officials document the Committee's impact on US policy in Asia during the Vietnam War while maintaining its identity as a "catalyst and service organization." There are materials from a 1969 convocation, "United States and China: the Next Decade," along with position papers on topics such as Sino-American cultural exchanges. Also here are memos and other items from the Chinese Table Tennis Team's US visit in 1972, known as "ping pong diplomacy." Board of Directors Meeting records include background papers.

Subseries II.4: Organizations-Alphabetical, 1949-1998

Scope and Contents

Organizations, Alphabetical contains materials, which Barnett arranged alphabetically, from his participation in several organizations, including the Center for Strategic and International Studies. There are documents from the Government Research Corporation's China Advisory Group, which later became the China Group. In 1970 Barnett helped organize what came to be the China Discussion Group, a gathering of academicians, ambassadors, intelligence officials and others who met at each other's homes to discuss US-China policy. Correspondence, agendas, member lists, and other materials from those meetings are in this subseries. Also here are materials on the origins and activities of the Social Science Research Council's Joint Committee on Contemporary China. Some items on the National Committee on US-China Relations are here

Series IV: Writings and Master files, 1939-1997Scope and Contents

Writings and Master Files contains news dispatches, essays, opinion pieces, journal articles, books, and other works written by Barnett from his undergraduate days at Yale and reporting for the Chicago Daily News through retirement. He wrote the introduction to the once ubiquitous red paperback, Quotations from Chairman Mao Tse-tung, published in 1967.

Subseries IV.1: "Past Publications," 1939-1995Scope and Contents

"Past Publications" (Barnett's words) contains news clippings and teletype reports filed by Barnett from China beginning in 1947 and chronicling the Communist siege of Peking. Also here is a carbon copy of a December 1948 letter written by Barnett and New York Herald Tribune reporter A.T. Steele to Mao Zedong requesting an interview with a list of questions about the Nanking Government, the Kuomintang Revolutionary Committee, and future Communist relations with the outside world. This subseries contains reports, some with maps, sent by Barnett from throughout Asia as an American Universities Field Staff correspondent for the Institute of Current World Affairs during the 1940s and 1950s. Also here are opinion pieces and interviews on Nixon's 1972 trip to China and later US China policy as well as correspondence, notes, drafts, and final versions of speeches and published articles. Handwritten speech and lecture notes from 1950 through 1997 discuss topics such as US-China relations, foreign policy decisions, political and economic trends in China, and problems of security and stability in Asia. Press references folders contain news clippings of interviews of Barnett and articles in which he is quoted or referenced. Of special note are press reactions to Barnett's testimony on US-China relations at 1966 Senate Foreign Relations Committee Hearings.

Subseries IV.2: Books, 1960-1996

Scope and Contents

Books contains correspondence, contracts, notes, drafts, manuscripts, readers' comments, footnote material, publicity, advance copy mailing lists, and reviews for books written by Barnett. This subseries also contains materials on publications Barnett co-authored and chapters he wrote in books authored by others. Author-publisher letters consist of correspondence between Barnett and colleagues or publishing representatives regarding his and others' works. A 1977 note to Barnett from Council on Foreign Affairs Vice President John Temple Swing congratulates Barnett for being "our all-time best-selling author."

Series V: Mixed Media:, 1940-1997

Scope and Contents

Mixed Media contains materials in various formats including handwritten notecards and pocket spiral notebooks, photographic prints and negatives, audio and video recordings, and travel and tourism items.

Subseries V.1: Notecards and Notebooks, 1940-1996

Scope and Contents

Notecards and Notebooks consists of handwritten notecards and small spiral bound notebooks. Some notecards contain interview notes from Barnett's travels through Asia early in his career; some are address cards arranged by location or by last name. Other notecards are handwritten speech and lecture outlines. Spiral notebooks number more than 200 and contain personal and travel diaries from trips to Asia throughout his career. Tucked among them is a January 5, 1960, memo, "CFR Study Group on US Policy in Southeast Asia."

Subseries V.2: Photographs:, 1933-1989

Scope and Contents

Photographs contains black and white as well as color prints and negatives plus some slides and a small roll of exposed film. Early images chronicle Barnett family celebrations in Shanghai in the 1930s along with shots of Yale from his undergraduate days. Subsequent photos record his journeys throughout Asia and include pre-Communist China as well as Communist troops entering Peking in 1949. Photos from the 1980s cover later trips to China and elsewhere in Asia.
