Biographical / Historical

William L. Westermann (1873 -1954) was named honorary curator of papyri in 1925, working with Clinton Keyes (1888-1943) of the Classics Department, and was succeeded by John Day (Classics, 1902-1961). J. Frank Gilliam (1915-1990) was in the Classics Department from 1962-65, but served as curator 1970 – 1981. A. Arthur Schiller (1902-1977) of the Law School was a Coptologist and worked mostly on the Columbia ostraca, but also acquired and worked on papyri. Roger Bagnall (b. 1947) had a joint appointment to History and Classics in 1974, taught papyrology, and was the honorary curator from 1981 to 2007, succeeded by Raffaella Cribiore (1948-2023) to 2008, and Rodney Ast (b. 1972) to 2009. In 2011 David Ratzan became honorary curator, and still advises on the collection, though he has been at NYU since 2014.

The Westermann material (mostly in Greek) was always housed with the Libraries, first in Low Library, then moved to rooms on the fourth floor of Butler Library in 1934. Other papyri (mostly Coptic or Arabic) followed their own trajectories, mostly ending up in the library's care by the 1960s. Oversight of the collection was transferred to the Rare Book and Manuscript Library in 1955, and the collection itself moved within RBML stack space in 1956.

Summary

The Columbia collection includes ca. 2150 papyri in a variety of languages including Greek, Latin, Egyptian (Demotic, Coptic and Hieratic) and Arabic. Among the papyri, there are also a few texts on parchment and paper. The papyri range in date from the 3rd century BCE to the 7th century CE and come from different parts of Egypt. About 300 have been published in the volumes of Columbia Papyri (P.Col., volumes I-XI) and a few more were published elsewhere. The papyri preserve a variety of texts, from ancient fragments of important literary works (Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, Euripides' Orestes, Plato's Phaedrus) written much earlier than the medieval manuscripts upon which modern editions are usually based, to mundane documents such as private letters, tax receipts, petitions and contracts, which illustrate the economic activities, personal relationships, legal conflicts and contractual arrangements of people in Greco-Roman Egypt over a period of about 1000 years.

The collection also includes library and other records about the acquisition and stewardship of the collection.

Custodial History

Most of the papyri (P. Col. Inv. 1 – 553) were purchased between 1923 and 1932 for Westermann; these purchases are the best documented. They were housed in the library from their time of purchase. Other papyri, in Greek, Coptic, and Arabic, were acquired between 1901 and 2001, mostly by or for various faculty (Gottheil, Jeffery, and Schiller: see Scope and Contents Note for details). There were a few small gifts over the years as well, starting with a gift of 16 papyri in 1901 from the Egyptian Exploration Fund of London.

Processing Information

Cataloged Christina Hilton Fenn 08/--/89.

Larger pieces of papyri were glassed in 1930. The papyri were photostated, as a cataloging stopgap, in the 1940s. A card file of Greek material was made later by the faculty curators. Lawrence I. Feinberg (MA, 1967) reglassed the papyri in 1968-72 in heavy safety glass with taped edges. He also accessioned groups of papyri acquired outside the Westermann purchases.

The APIS project in the 1990s made scholarly catalog records for the papyri and ostraca and shared them online for the first time. Much of the cataloging of the Columbia material was done by Raffaella Cribiore, with Rosalie Cook, Todd Hickey, Petra Sijpesteijn, and student assistance. The collection was rehoused in connection with the cataloging project. The heavy airplane glass was replaced with lighter glass, held together with binder clips; the unglazed papyri were put into new acid-free paper enclosures. Most of the glazed papyri and a portion of the ostraca were imaged by the Columbia University Libraries and added to the online record. These records are now accessible through www.papyri.info

In conjunction with the creation of this finding aid, part of series I, and series II, III, and IV were rehoused and organized. Some material was given P. Col. inv. numbers and added to series I.

Extensive work was done on the collection by Elizabeth Heintges (GSAS '25) as part of the primary source internship program. This included processing and describing series II-IV as well as extensive description and rehousing of the papyri themselves.

Collection Inventory

Series I: Papyri

Arrangement

Papyri are organized by number. Each papyrus has a P.Col.inv (Papyrus Columbia inventory) number. The papyri which were published in the Columbia Papyri series also have a P. Col. number. A few papyri which were published in other projects have P. Fay, P. Hib. or P. Oxy (Fayum, Hibeh, Oxyrhynchus) numbers. The papyri are shelved with the published papyri first (P. Fay, P. Hib, P. Oxy, P. Col.), then the unpublished (P.Col.inv.). Each sequence is subdivided by size; glassed and unglased papyri are boxed separately.

Scope and Contents

P.Col.inv. 1 – 544 were mostly purchased 1923 – 1930 from Maurice Nahman (1868-1948) through a syndicate headed by H. I. Bell, of the British Museum. Columbia's share were largely documentary, the interest of Professor William Westermann.

P.Col.inv. 545-553 were a joint purchase in 1932 by Columbia and the University of Michigan. The papyri were acquired by Prof. A.E.R. Boak of Michigan, partly from Nahman.

P.Col.inv. 554-775 were non-Westermann acquisitions, numbered and incorporated in the collection by Lawrence Feinberg in 1968, as follows:

---P.Col.inv. 554-575 – Greek and Coptic vellum fragments acquired by Prof. Richard Gottheil (1862-1936)

---P.Col.inv. 576-684 – Coptic and Arabic papyri purchased circa 1932

---P.Col.inv. 685-754 – mostly Arabic papyri, all purchases by Professor Arthur Jeffery (1892-1959) in Egypt, 1946

---P.Col.inv. 755-774 – Greek and Coptic papyri acquired in 1960 from the Metropolitan Museum of Art along with a number of Egypt Exploration Society papyri and numerous ostraca

---P.Col.inv. 775 – 3 Arabic fragments transferred from the School of Library Service

---P.Col.inv. 776 – 785: additions made by Feinberg in 1970 & 1972: 8 papyri from the D.E. Smith collection and two the gift of Otto Fuhrmann (1889-1966; RBML staff member 1950-1954)

---P.Col.inv. 786, uncatalogued fragment, added by Raffaella Criore between 1994 and 2008.

P.Col.inv. 787-822, and 872-874: these were found in A.A. Schiller's papers by Roger Bagnall and added to the collection sometime after 1977, and given inventory numbers between 2003 and 2006.

P.Col.inv. 823 – 871: Arabic material, numbered and added by Jane Siegel in 2018. Found in a box marked "Miscellaneous" at the end of the oriental [i.e., Arabic script] manuscript collection, most likely from the D.E. Smith collection, but impossible to tell for sure; item identifications made by Boris Liebrecht (Freie Universität Berlin) in 2018.

Series IV: Card Inventory, circa 1979-1996

Scope and Contents

Used by the faculty curators before the creation of the APIS database. Includes inventory numbers from 1 to 553, and then scattered items from P. Col. inv. 571 through P. Col. inv. 752, and the P. Col. Hib, Fay, and Oxy items. This suggests the card file was created to track the papyri in Greek, for possible publication and teaching.
