Biographical Note

Moore studied at Yale University (B.A., 1915, B. Music, 1917) with D.S. Smith and Horatio Parker. He composed several songs at Yale, including the fight song "Goodnight, Harvard." After he left Yale, Moore served in the Navy as a lieutenant during World War I. After his discharge, Moore studied music in Paris with Vincent d'Indy, and later studied with Nadia Boulanger and Charles Tournemire. In 1921, Moore became Director of Music and organist at the Cleveland Museum of Art, and also studied with Ernest Bloch. From 1923-1925, he served as organist at Adelbert College, Western Reserve University. And in 1925, Moore won a Pulitzer Traveling Fellowship, and spent a year in Europe.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical Note

Moore joined the faculty at Columbia University as Professor of Composition in 1926. He remained at Columbia until his retirement in 1962, also serving as Chair of the Music Department from 1940-1962.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical Note

Moore published two books, Listening to Music (1932) and From Madrigal to Modern Music (1942).

^ Return to Table of Contents

Biographical Note

Moore was also a prominent spokesman for composers and musicians in the United States. He became active in the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers (ASCAP) and served as Director from 1957-1960. He was elected as a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters in 1941, and later served as vice president and president. Moore's diverse positions, including the Secretary of the Alice M. Ditson Fund, allowed him to help numerous European musicians escape to the United States during World War II. For example, Moore arranged a stipend from the Ditson Fund for composer Bela Bartok to transcribe the folk songs in his collection. Moore established the Columbia Opera Workshop through the Ditson Fund, as well as an annual festival of contemporary music at Columbia University.

Scope and Content

Douglas Stuart Moore (1893-1969) was an American composer, educator, and author. His best known works include the operas The Devil and Daniel Webster (1937-1939), The Ballad of Baby Doe (1953-1956), and Giants in the Earth (1949-1950), which won the Pulitzer Prize for Music in 1951. The papers include clippings, correspondence, course and lecture materials, librettos, photographs, programs, production information, publicity materials, recordings, scores, and sketches.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

The collection includes a wide range of materials documenting Moore's work as a composer. The collection includes manuscript scores, published scores, outlines, recordings, and sketches. These materials document Moore's compositions from his early work at Hotchkiss School and at Yale University, as well as his professional career. Moore also kept a register of all his compositions, arranged chronologically. The register includes the date of composition for each work, lists of all performances of which he was aware, and includes notes on recordings and publications. In addition, the collection includes clippings, correspondence, librettos, photographs, programs, publicity materials, and texts related to his works and to the performances of his works.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

Moore's professional career at Columbia University and his work with professional organizations is also documented in his papers. There is material relating to the curriculum and administration of Columbia University's Music Department, which Moore chaired from 1940-1962, as well as course binders and other lecture notes. There is also correspondence related to Moore's membership in the Century Club, the MacDowell Association, and the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and to his editorship of the Prentice Hall Music series.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

There is also documentation of Moore's professional writing. The papers include articles, clippings, and manuscripts of articles, books, and reviews written by Moore.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

The papers also include personal, biographical, and school materials. This collection includes appointment books, awards, biographical materials, diaries, holiday cards, photographs of Moore and of Moore's friends, school materials, memorabilia, and materials related to Moore's activities at Yale University and in the Navy. The material from Yale University includes photographs and programs documenting his activities with the Dramatic Association and the Elizabethan Club, as well as materials related to his friendship with poet Archibald MacLeish. The collection also includes articles, clippings, dissertations, and theses about Moore, as well as recorded interviews with Moore and some of his colleagues and friends.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

The papers also include family materials. Moore's correspondence with his mother, Myra D. Moore, is particularly valuable due to its length and frequency. Moore habitually wrote to his mother every week, and their correspondence documents their activities over a large span of time (1906-1933). There is also a smaller amount of correspondence, as well as clippings, diaries, photographs, and other materials related to Moore's wife, Emily Moore, and other family members.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Content

The papers include a small amount of material from other individuals. These items include inscribed books and scores, as well as articles and clippings about Moore written by others. In addition, Lewis J. Hardee, who wrote his master's thesis on Moore, donated his research material and original interviews to be included with the Moore Papers: these form Series XI of the papers.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Arrangement

This collection is arranged into twelve series and several subseries.

Series I: Cataloged Correspondence

Scope and Contents

This series includes correspondence files for several prominent correspondents (Box 1), as well as the correspondence with Moore's mother, Myra D. Moore (Boxes 2-9). These materials were originally cataloged at the item level; catalog cards for individual persons/items can be found in the card catalog the Rare Book & Manuscript Library, but they are not available online.

Scope and Contents

Much of the correspondence in Series I is between Moore and his mother, Myra D. Moore. This correspondence, which spanned a 27 year period from the fall of 1906 to late 1933 represents perhaps the most comprehensive record of Moore's life, for it was his habit to write to his mother every Sunday, a ritual to which he was remarkably faithful. The various stages of Moore's life are apparent in his letters: his first experience away from home at the Hotchkiss School in Connecticut, his undergraduate years at Yale, time spent in a Maritime Academy in Maryland, his service in the Navy during the First World War, his tenure as Musical Director of the Cleveland Museum of Art, further travels in Europe, his position in the Music Department of Columbia University (1926-1962). The letters also follow the course of Myra Moore's life, where she lived in Brooklyn, Long Island, and finally Orange County California.

Scope and Contents

Correspondence added to the collection at Columbia University after 1991 was not cataloged at this level. Additional correspondence for individuals named in Series I can be found in Subseries II.3.

Ballad of Baby Doe (Vocal score), 1958	box 109	volume 1 & 2

Physical Description: 2 Volumes

Scope and Contents

Ozalid reproduction of holograph, with extensive manuscript performance markings, edits, changes in lyrics, and corrections in pencil and pen.

Scope and Contents

This vocal score was owned by conductor Emerson Buckley and likely used to prepare for the world premiere of The ballad of Baby Doe, July 7,1956, in Central City, Colorado. This early version varies from the final New York version of 1958, most notably with the inclusion of "Out of the darkness" (Act 1, Scene 2) and "Wake snakes" (Act 2, Scene 1) and the later added "Poker scene" lacking. Act 2, Scene 2 (i.e. Scene 3 in New York version) was altered and reordered significantly.

Scope and Contents

Title written in pencil on title page. Manuscript cast list for Colorado performance pasted inside front cover of first volume. Extensive notes on roles and voices written in pencil on title page.

Ballad of baby Doe. Full Score. Act 1, Scenes 1-6 flatbox 110

Physical Description: 3 Volumes

Scope and Contents

Ozalid reproduction of full score originally printed by Tams-Witmark Music Library, with extensive manuscript performance markings, edits, corrections, and other annotations in black and red pencil. Some groupings of pages have been taped together and other pages have been replaced entirely.

Subseries IX.2: The Douglas Moore Fund, 1956, 2009, 2013-2016, 2018, (2013-2016)Scope and Contents

Contains material relating to the Douglas Moore Fund, founded in 2002 to support American opera companies in the development of new commissions, and to promote the work of mid-century American opera composers, like Douglas Moore. This subseries comprises correspondence and administrative documents relating to the operations of the fund, as collected by Miranda Beeson, the daughter of Moore's colleague, Jack Beeson, who served the Fund in a governance and consultancy capacity. These materials document various events and projects that the Fund was involved with, including publications, conferences, and performances, while also providing insights into the Fund's changing mission. The subseries also contains several inventories and chronologies of Moore's compositions, compiled by the Fund for an anthology of Moore's vocal music.
