Biographical / Historical

Born on July 5, 1919, in Battle Creek, Michigan, Eric L. McKittrick graduated from Flint Central High School in 1937, and attended Flint Junior College (1937-1939) and Hillsdale College (1940-1941). He served in the United States Army from 1941-1945, and spent time stationed in New York City. In 1947, he enrolled in the Columbia University School of General Studies.

He received a Bachelor's degree in 1949, and subsequently received two degrees in history from Columbia University; a Master's degree in 1951 and a Ph.D. in 1959. He was also a Columbia University Fellow (1951-1952) and taught as a Lecturer in American History in the School of General Studies (1952-1954).

Biographical / Historical

McKittrick taught at the University of Chicago (1955-1959) and Douglass College at Rutgers University (1959-1960) before joining the history department faculty at Columbia University in 1960. McKittrick became a full professor in 1965 and a professor emeritus upon his retirement in 1989. During his career, McKittrick also held visiting professorships at Vassar College, Smith College, Cambridge University, and Oxford University.

Biographical / Historical

Much of McKittrick's research focused on the development of the American party system and slavery and the Old South. His best-known work is "Andrew Johnson and Reconstruction" (1960). In this book, McKittrick argued that Johnson was at fault for the failures of his policies, a position that challenged the prevailing theory that these failures were caused by Republican Radicals. The book received the American History Association's John H. Dunning Prize. It was reissued in 1988, and remains an important work in the historiography of the Reconstruction. He also co-authored "The Age of Federalism: The Early American Republic, 1788-1800" (1993) with Stanley M. Elkins of Smith College. The book represented the culmination of over twenty-five years of research work. It received the Bancroft Prize in 1994 and the Cox Book Prize from the Society of the Cincinnati in 1995.

Biographical / Historical

Outside of his professional career, McKittrick devoted many years of service to Grace Church and served on many of its committees. He was also involved in the Century Association and the Historical Society of the Episcopal Church.

Biographical / Historical

McKittrick married Edyth Carol Stevenson of Flint, Michigan on December 26, 1946. The couple had two sons and two daughters. McKittrick died on April 24, 2002 in New York City.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Summary

The papers document McKittrick's teaching activities, professional activities and relationships, and research work on "The Age of Federalism: The Early American Republic, 1788-1800" (1993). There is also material related to McKittrick's activities with Grace Church, the Century Association, and the Historical Society of the Episcopal Church.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Summary

The papers include comprehensive coverage of McKittrick's teaching activities. He kept files for all of his lectureships and professional appointments (1952-1990). These files include general teaching files for particular course topics and chronological files for individual classes that he taught at several institutions. His teaching files include syllabi, reading lists, and extensive lecture outlines. His files on individual classes include class-specific syllabi, examination questions, notes, and correspondence with students and teaching assistants. McKittrick kept files on teaching assignments for masters and doctoral seminars, and on individual students, doctoral candidates, and orals and defenses. These files, as well as the alphabetical correspondence files, document not only McKittrick's teaching activities but also his working relationships with graduate students pursuing academic research work.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Summary

The papers are rich in professional correspondence. McKittrick's correspondents include many prominent historians, including Eric Foner, Richard Hofstadter, Mike Wallace, and C. Vann Woodward. There is extensive correspondence with Stanley Elkins, with whom he co-wrote several articles and "The Age of Federalism." The papers also include correspondence with many of his current and former students and dissertation advisees. The correspondence documents McKittrick's relationships within the scholarly community and also shows, together with his book reviews, his thoughts on other historical research projects.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Summary

The papers do not comprehensively document all of McKittrick's research activities. There are personal business files that relate to many of his articles and book reviews; these files contain correspondence, notes, and drafts. There are extensive research files available only for "The Age of Federalism." These files include correspondence with co-author Stanley Elkins, communications with research assistants, drafts, and notes. McKittrick also kept fan letters, reviews, and files on a related symposium and prizes received for the book.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Summary

There is also some documentation of McKittrick's professional activities outside of Columbia University, but it is not extensive in scope. McKittrick served on the Executive Board of the Society of American Historians for many years, and was also involved in the University Seminars held at Columbia University. There are records related to both of these activities. There is also documentation of his work on consulting projects, grant submissions and projects, evaluation teams, advisory committees, and award committees. Also included are files related to speeches, lectures, and comments and presentations related to specific conferences.

^ Return to Table of Contents

Summary

There is little personal material in the papers, although there is some documentation of McKittrick's activities outside of his professional career. McKittrick kept correspondence received from his friends, parents, and future wife during World War II. There is also material related to McKittrick's membership and activities in Grace Church, the Historical Society of the Episcopal Church, and the Century Association. McKittrick also kept a small amount of juvenilia, student material, and a file on his father's singing career with the Flint Civic Opera.

includes course material, chronological files on individual classes, and files on McKittrick's activities with graduate seminars, students, orals and defenses. McKittrick kept files of general course material by course title; these files include syllabi, detailed lecture outlines, and examination questions. He also kept chronological files on individual classes that he taught in the history department. These files include class-specific examination questions, reading lists, syllabi, and correspondence with individual students and teaching assistants. Some of these files, particularly the oldest files, also have additional notes written by McKittrick.

Scope and Contents

McKittrick kept separate files related to his teaching of the masters and doctoral seminars and on individual graduate students, doctoral candidates, and orals and defenses. These files include course material, student research proposals, notes, and correspondence. There is additional correspondence with dissertation advisees filed in the Alphabetical File of Series V: Correspondence.

Subseries IV.4: The Age of Federalism: The Early American Republic, 1788-1800, 1967-1998

Scope and Contents

This subseries includes drafts, fan letters, reviews, research files, and files on prizes received for the book and a related symposium. The research files are extensive. These files are usually grouped together by chapter, but there are also some files on general topics. The files include correspondence with co-author Stanley Elkins, communications with research assistants, conference notes, research notes, source material, and drafts.

Scope and Contents

There are also several annotated drafts. Each full annotated draft is in three parts and there are four copies; three copies and a "master copy." It appears that these drafts were distributed to readers for comments, but there is no clear identification of the commentator on the drafts - one full set is initialed "K.E.," another single draft has the name Ervin written on it.

Subseries V.2: Alphabetical File, 1953-2000Scope and Contents

This subseries is comprised of files on both personal and professional correspondents. Many files also function as subject files; these files include correspondence not only with the named persons, but also in reference to them in relation to manuscripts, recommendations, and projects. In addition to correspondence, many files include clippings, manuscripts, and memorials prepared by McKittrick.

Scope and Contents

Most of the correspondents in the alphabetical file are colleagues, dissertation advisees, former students, and historians, but correspondence with members of Grace Church and the Century Association is also included in the files. Important correspondents include Bishop Christopher FitzSimons Allison, Stanley Elkins, Richard Hofstadter, Elizabeth McCaughey (Ross), Lionel Trilling, C. Vann Woodward, and Mike Wallace (co-author of Gotham: A History of New York City to 1898).
