Historical Note

In 1955, the University Council asked President Grayson Kirk to appoint a President's Committee on the Educational Future of the University. The Committee would ideally have the following powers and responsibilities: "to make a searching inquiry into the functions of the University as an aid in determining how the University may most wisely employ its resources in the period immediately ahead; to confer with, and to inform the members of Columbia University, especially the several faculties and departments, of its findings and views; and, from time to time to make recommendations to the President of the University, to the University Council, and to the several faculties and departments of the University."

Arthur W. Macmahon, the Eaton Professor of Public Administration, was appointed Executive Director of the President's Committee on the Educational Future of the University. The other five members of the Committee were Charles H. Behre, Jr., Professor of Geology; Charles Frankel, Professor of Philosophy; Maxwell Gensamer, Professor of Metallurgy; Ernest J. Simmons, Professor of Russian Literature; and Howard R. Williams, Professor of Law. The work of the committee was financed by a $165,000 grant of the Carnegie Foundation. In its two-year study, the Committee analyzed the structure and course offerings of the University.

The Macmahon Report, as it became known, was issued to the Faculty in December 1957 and to the press in January 1958. It called for the establishment of a Science and Engineering college; proposed that the School of General Studies be limited only to those students working towards a degree; urged a broad program of expansion of University facilities, including a new gymnasium and the formation of a graduate center; asked that the number of required courses be reduced; and called for the creation of a senior honors program, among other recommendations.

Questionnaire, 1956

Scope and Contents

In June 1956, the President's Committee on the Educational Future of the University sent out a questionnaire to all 1956 graduates. Over 1,900 questionnaires were mailed out. The Committee asked those who "received a degree from Columbia this year" to speak about their experience. There were numerous questions: educational background, degree received, permanent address, residence during attendance, number of credits pursued each semester, scholarships and loans. Graduates were also asked to judge the value and quality of the lectures, recitations, examinations, and student-to-faculty and student-to-fellow-student relationships. They were asked to share what was the most rewarding and the least agreeable aspects of life at Columbia and to rate the library, housing, and recreational facilities. After 9 pages of questions, alumni were given 4 blank pages for additional comments. There is a full record carton (Box 11) and a half (Box 12) of completed questionnaires, as well as mailing labels and returned or undelivered forms. There are also the summaries, tabulations, code sheets, etc. The student comments in the blank pages were later transcribed and organized by school.
