Series I: Lenny Bruce

Scope and Contents

Albert Goldman and Lawrence Schiller did such extensive research about Lenny Bruce that Goldman was able to make this biography a vivid recreation of Bruce's life and times. It launched Goldman as a biographer.

Series III: John Lennon

Scope and Contents

In his The Lives of John Lennon Goldman produced a brilliant and perceptive portrait of Lennon. It was, and remains, a controversial work of biography.

Series XII: Albert Goldman's Journals

Scope and Contents

The journals of Albert Goldman are a frank day to day chronicle of his life written as a casual conversation with himself. They do not have any literary pretensions (as he noted many times), but are an almost off the cuff daily chatty appraisal of his personal affairs and his work. Together they form a running narrative of his life from the years 1973 to the day of his death in March of 1994.

Begins with recorded note from Goldman to someone named Charlotte, talking about an eye operation he just had. After about 1 minute, it switches to an interview with a man with a European accent talking about John Lennon's time in Denmark. This goes for about 15 minutes, followed by a phone interview with another man, also seems related to Lennon - he seems to have worked on Lennon's farm in upstate NY. Not sure which, if either, of these guys is Max Palevsky, from the current title.
